

Salle 7 Course Outline: 2025/2026 Mme Leianne

Bienvenue à la salle 7!

This year will be filled with learning, collaboration, critical thinking, and problem solving across all subject areas. Our guiding theme is:

- In salle 7, we are writers, we are French speakers, we are allies, we are mathematicians, and we are scientists.

Everything we do will be grounded in Truth and Reconciliation. This approach helps us recognize our role as allies and learners, and encourages us to act with grace and responsibility toward the well-being of our community, our country, and the world beyond.

My Beliefs as Your Teacher

- I believe in empowering students to ask for what they need, unapologetically.
- I believe in second, third, and even tenth chances. We are all learners, and learning takes persistence and courage.
- I believe students should be the drivers of their education—setting personal goals in writing, reading, speaking, math, and science, and working to achieve them step by step.
- I believe learning should be meaningful and connected to the real world, so that everything we do has impact and purpose.

How We Will Learn This Year

I design our learning cross-curricularly, based on the Manitoba curricula, but always in connection to the real world:

- Math: We learn math through Exploration & Discovery. In Room 7, math is not about memorizing steps — it is about thinking like mathematicians and problem solving and then talking about our thinking in math.
- French Language Learning: New vocabulary, a variety of French texts, verbs, and grammar will be integrated naturally into our projects and daily routines.
- Truth and Reconciliation: We will read texts by Indigenous authors, learn about local history, and practice allyship through projects and discussions.
- Science: Inquiry and experimentation will help us see ourselves as scientists, making connections between ecosystems, sustainability, and Indigenous knowledge systems.
- English: We will examine a variety of texts, multimodal texts, and writing forms that allow students to discover new genres and deepen their appreciation of literature.

This school year holds so much promise, and I look forward to working in partnership with you as we guide students in exploring new ideas and developing their unique interests. I truly value your feedback and suggestions, as conversations with families often open new pathways and help me make thoughtful decisions that best support our students.
